Most income protection policies pay benefits only when you can’t work due to injury or sickness. But what if a family member becomes seriously injured or seriously sick? The Family Care Benefit\(^1\) can help you take time for caregiving. This benefit provides cash to replace lost income due to working fewer hours and earning less income to care for a family member.

This unique benefit comes with Platinum Advantage, available only from The Standard.\(^2\) Here’s some reasons why it’s so valuable — for anyone facing the possibility of having to care for a family member.

The Growing Costs of Caregiving

- 43.5 million U.S. adults provide unpaid caregiving.\(^1\)
- 72% of family caregivers also work 30 or more hours a week.\(^2\)
- 30% who took Family Medical Leave reported severe financial difficulties.\(^3\)
- 2 in 5 people said caregiving caused emotional stress.\(^3\)

How the Family Care Benefit Works

Remember the “20/20 guideline.” This simple rule of thumb explains that The Standard will pay the Family Care Benefit, after the benefit waiting period, if you work at least 20% fewer hours — resulting in an income loss of 20% or more. The lost income must be due to taking time off work to care for a family member who has a serious health condition caused by injury or sickness.

The benefit waiting period will begin on the first day of the family member’s serious health condition. You don’t have to work fewer hours or lose income during this period.

Family member includes a parent, spouse, domestic partner or child (including an adopted child, stepchild and child of a domestic partner).

Qualifying for the benefit requires documentation of your income and employment. You’ll need to show that a family member has an eligible serious health condition and is experiencing one of these situations:

- Receiving inpatient care in a hospital, hospice or residential medical care facility
- Requires substantial supervision due to severe cognitive impairment
- Is unable to perform two or more activities of daily living without hands-on or standby assistance
- Is terminally ill with a condition that is reasonably expected to result in a death within 12 months

The benefit paid will be a portion of your basic monthly benefit proportional to your income loss. If your income loss is more than 80%, you’ll be eligible for the full basic monthly benefit.

You can be approved for the Family Care Benefit twice during the life of the policy for a combined maximum pay-out equal to six times the basic monthly benefit.

Susan’s Story

IT Manager, age 50

Family Care Crisis: Mother’s Terminal Cancer

When Susan’s mother was diagnosed with stage 4 breast cancer, she took family leave from work to be by her mother’s side. The Family Care Benefit provided monthly cash benefits to help replace her lost income. That gave Susan the financial freedom to focus on what mattered most — her mother.
